

ALEXANDER SENT TO CORNER

Alexander-
in the corner

A fearful and frightening incident occurred during one of Mrs (girls and boys) Cruise's English periods recently. The teacher apparently spotted Alexander the Great (twit) doing something he shouldn't - smoking, and talking to Hardegg - when he should have been listening to her inspiring reading of an excessively boring poem. Mercilessly, she pounced on Alex and ordered him to go to the corner at once. Naturally, our hero did not take her seriously, but she would not be ignored, and stood with a sarcastic smirk on her dial as Alex made the desperate journey. The teacher even went so far as to suggest that Alex should stand over the hole for which room 16 has become famous. Alex flatly refused, and would not even face the wall when asked to do so by several members of the class, all of whom were highly amused by the incident.

When later questioned about the incident by a (CPC) reporter, Alex declined to comment. (CPC) NEWS.

GOODBYE TEACHERS

We have now reached that point in our publication where articles intended for general reading have concluded.

Some of the articles to follow are suitable for students only.

So goodbye teachers, see you in our next paper!
