Monaro Crescent, Friday, (CPC) NEWS. Our editor was today most viciously and outrageously attacked by a wild tribe of Grammar School twits.

Chilblaine spotted them approaching him, with the aid of his famous binoculars, from about half a mile up the road. However, they seemed to be on a peaceful mission so he took little notice.

Five minutes later (Chilblaine takes five minutes to walk about half a mile) when within cooeeing distance of the savages, Karlos plainly heard their leader exclaim "Hey, mate!" in angry tones. He then turned and signaled to his followers, who immediately removed some large pieces of rock from the ground, and carelessly hurled them in Chilblaine's direction.

Terror-stricken, Chilblaine took to his heels and scampered up Flinders Way like a white tornadoe. But the young hooligans were not to be deterred so easily. They hailed a passing cab and quickly overtook Karlos, at whom they aimed further guided missiles from the windows of the cab.

Soon afterwards, Chilblaine was rushed to Koomari House for observation, but was later allowed to escape, as there was nothing they could do for him.

The louts are still at large!
